An investigation of the expenses of the State Board of Equalization by the Franklin County Grand Jury, for tho last six years, is recommended by State Inspector and Examiner Scwell, In his report to Acting Governor Black. Sewell says the members collected fees for working on Sundays and holldays during the timo the board was In session. He says they collected $5 a Sunday for as many as 84 Sundays. If they worked on Sunday, Sewell says, they should he indicted and fined for violating the Sunday law. The state will receive, he adds, $50,000 in fines. If they did not work on Sundays and holidays then, he says, the state ought to recover the money which was unjustly paid out. The average expenses of the board annually for the time eovered by the report are $6,000.

Wood Given Reversal. The Jefferson Circuit Court was roversed by the Court of Appeals in an opinion by Judge Clarko in the caso of Harry I. Wood against the Indianapolls Abattoir Co. of Kennicky, in which a verdict was directed for the defendant. Wood's automobile collided with the company's truck at Fourth and Oak streets October 15, them. 1915, and he sued for damages. The lower court directed a verdict for tho defendant, but the Court of Appeals held that Wood had made out a prima facle case and the burden of proof was on the company to show that the driver was not ongaged in the company's business at the time.

A Soldier's Dog.

In a tiny French village lived Jacques, a St. Bernard dog. He ers, etc., ö cents per line per Insertlon. was greatly beloved by the villagers, but between the dog and his master there was a much stronger bond of affection. Every day, when the men drilled Hill. Bille and Jimine had been layupon the green, Jacques stalked up and down with them, turning when they did and, and looking very soldierly.

Soon there came a day of great confusion. Women and children were weeping; men were pale and grave. Jacques' master took him to a friend's house, where the dog was shut up in a room. Before he left, his master put his arms around him and Jacques his head. Then the dog was could see the soldiers leave the village. He whined and barked, but no one came to let him out. Finally, as the last column marched from sight, Jacques gave one frantic bound through the wincrowd. He overtook the soldiers and sought his master's side. They tried to send him back; they days Jacques followed his master's battery on the march.

Then, on the fifth day, this division of the French army was brought into battle. It was horfrightened. He saw men and horses shriek and fall. He pressed closer to his master's side. But in the late afternoon somehow they became separated, and as Jaques stopped to drink the spilled water from a dead soldarted before his eyes. He was hit by with a flying piece of iron, and fell. For a long time he lay motionless, then he crawled painhis death.

It happened—as such do haplying on the ground, mortally wounded, and inexpressibly lonely as death approached. Then the dying man felt a muzzle, soft and warm, creep into his fevered hand. A great furry form snuggled close to him, and with a last effort the master put his arms around his dog, and so they died,

That night, as the soldiers were picking up the dead, they found the two friends. And they gave the dog a soldier's funeral with his master and other dead com-

Probable Results If Outcome Had Been Different, Explained in Book by Engilsh Writer Years Ago.

About 60 years ago an English writer, Sir Edward Creasy, published a book which he called "The Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World." Hts purpose was to describe those great milltary events which have had the greatest influence upon human history. Euch battle described, had it re snited differently, would have completely changed the course of eiviliza tion, says the World's Work. Had Churles Martel not have won the battle of Tours, for example, the whole of Europe, and that means also North and South America, would very likely have become Mohammedan in religion. "Perhaps the Interpretation of the Koran," says Glbhou, deserlbing the consequences of this battle, "would now be taught in the schools of Oxford and her pupils might demonstrate to the English people the truth of the revelation of Mohamet.'

Ten of Crensy's epochal battles have Christiau era. Four of them represent victories which were won on French soll—the battle of Chalons, A. D. 451; the battle of Tours, 732; Joan of Arc's victory nt Orleans, 1429, and the battle of Valmy, in 1792. Another was a great French victory won on English soll—the battle of Hastings in 1066. Two others-the battle of Blenheim, In 1704, and the battle of Waterloo in 1815-were great French defeats. It appears, therefore, that of the ten most decisive battles fought in the Christian era five were great French victories and two were French defeuts. No other nation has any such military history as this. This mere record indicates the part which France has played in advancing elviltzation. So far as Europe is concerned the greatest events in modern history have time, when the democratic nations have joined hands to deliver France from the cowardly attack which Germany has made upon her, it is well to keep this fact la miad.
